Greek mythology

Sifnos was one of the richest islands in ancient times because of its natural resources of gold, aluminum and silver. Trade went on with many of the other Cycladic islands, as well as with cities on the mainland. According to mythology, the locals would give a golden egg to Apollo each year, but when the gold mines were almost depleted, they tried to fool the god by painting as stone instead. This angered the god so much, that he sent the tyrant Polycrates who took all precious metals from the island.
