

Athens & Patmos

6 Nights

01 July 2014 – 30 September 2014

Summary

Patmos is not a big island, but it is one of the best known. It was here St. John had his vision and wrote the apocalypse, and this is why Patmos is sometimes called "The Jerusalem of the Aegean". The Monastery of St. Johns towers above the capital, Chora, and the whole island breathes of faith and devotion.

Nevertheless, there is more to the island than its Christian reputation. There are many nice beaches along the jagged coastline, and the people grow fruits and olives on the green hills. The landscape invites you to take long walks and there is much to discover.

Festivals and activities

The International Film Festival: Film-makers, actors, directors and film-critics from every part of the world are gathered here to attend one of the most important cultural summer events in Greece. (July)

The Festival of Folklore Dances: Many dancing groups unite from many parts of Greece and Asia, all dressed with the traditional costumes symbolizing the strong connection to the traditional and historic events of each region

Greek mythology

The island of Patmos was first named Litois, in honour of the Goddess Artemis who was also called Litoida because she was the daughter of Lito. Legend says that the island sunk into the sea and that Artemis, with the help of Apollo, managed to persuade Zeus to bring the island back to the surface. As a proof of devotion, the inhabitants of the island named it Litois. Patmos is also linked to another legend, the one of Orestes. It is said that he fled to the island after murdering his mother Clytemnestra, and was hunted by the Erynies.
